J. R. GRAHAM WINS.

Long Lake Man Defeats Milwaukee
Marksman and Wins $200.

In a shooting contest at Watson Park,
Chicago, Tuesday for a side bet of $200, J.
R. Graham of Long Lake, well known in Antioch, defeated Dr. J. L. Williamson of Milwaukee by a margin of three birds.

The event was at 100 live pigeons per man at 30 yards rise.

M. Thayer of Long Lake was among the spectators.

Graham shot in snappy and quick time,
almost five yards faster than Williamson, who seemed more deliberate in the use of his second barrel, which allowed the tailing birds too much distance.

Graham invariably shot both barrels in rapid succession, killing twenty-four out of his first twenty-five with one dead out of bounds, twenty-four out of his second twenty-five, running thirty straight; twenty-two out of his third twenty-five and twenty-four out of the final twenty-five, scoring ninety-four in the total. Williamson scored ninety-one.

RUSSIAN ENGINE.

Largest at Paris Exposition--Has Twelve
Driving Wheels.

The most remarkable Russian engine
in the Paris exposition is the gigantic twelve-wheeled double six-coupled duplex compound on a modification of the Mallet system and bearing the number H. 810. This is by far the biggest and heaviest engine in the whole exhibition, weighing as it does eighty-six tons and having a vast forty-six-ton tender appended, the total weight of tender and engine being therefore no less than 132 tons, while the top of the chimney stands 16 feet 9 inches above the rail level. This mighty locomotive is constructed on the articulated plan, the four-foot driving wheels being coupled in two groups of six each, one being practically a steam bogie, while each group is driven by one high-pressure and one low-pressure cylinder, the respective diameters being 18 1/2 inches and 28 inches, says
the Engineering Magazine. In the case of this particular engine, more may be said on behalf of the complex system of articulation employed than in the case of the smaller but similar locomotive. The Russian twelve-wheeler is intended for the haulage of immense loads, and the ascent of steep grades.
It is essential to the development of its full usefulness that it should be able to utilize its entire adhesive weight for traction and that this weight should be distributed as widely as possible upon the rails without such distribution involving an undue length of rigid wheelbase.

CAMPAIGN EXPENSES.

In National Contests the Heaviest Outlay
Is Near the Close.

The most expensive work of a national campaign is done during the last three weeks before the election. Every doubtful state and city is closely watched by men prompt to discover every change in the political tide, and money is transmitted in large sums to the localities in which it is believed it will produce the best results. A few days before the election in 1888 West Virginia received $44,000 from the democratic national committee and the Republicans sent $50,000 to the same state. About the same time the Democrats sent $100,000 into Indiana; and three nights before the election Chairman Quay of the Republican national committee sent $300,000 from New York to trusted lieutenants in Fort Wayne, Ind. A fortnight before the election in 1896 the Republicans became doubtful about Iowa, says World's Work. Chairman Hanna at once resolved upon a personal canvass of every doubtful voter in the state. He proposed that every voter not classed on the polling lists either as a downright Democrat or a downright Republican should be visited by some zealous and tactful member of the Republican party.
Before election day the thousands of such men in towns, in cities and in the country were sought out and appealed to by the Republicans most likely to win them; and this canvass is said to have cost the Republican national committee more than $200,000.
Reckoning all the expenses in all the states, it may be roughly estimated that a presidential campaign, including also congressional, gubernatorial and lesser campaigns, causes the total expenditure of perhaps $20,000,000.

Depredations of Texas Coyotes.

Citizens of McMullen and adjoining counties of Texas are in a state of terror because of the depredations of coyotes, which are killing scores of cattle. Worse than that, the slinking brutes are spreading hydrophobia among the stock. A man living in Tilden was bitten by an infected coit and died in a few days. Ways and means of getting rid of the pests are being considered.

Grand Master Authorizes Lodge.

The Prince of Wales, as Grand Master, has given his sanction to the issue of a warrant authorizing the establishment in London of the Lord
Roberts Lodge of Freemasons.

BREAD AT PARIS.

Made from Fresh Flour Each Day--Has Increased Nutrition.

Among all the exhibits of bread and breadmaking at the Paris exhibition one of great interest was a system of milling and baking combined. It is well known that all food substances
when ground to a fine powder have a tendency to become oxidized. As is the case with coffee, which is the best when freshly roasted and freshly ground, so it is with cereal flour, which is never so aromatic or so nutritious
as at the moment when it is first made.
The Schweitzer system, in regard to the milling operations, is a return to the old system of millstones, with the exception that corrugated steel grinders take the place of the millstones of the olden days, says the Paris Messenger. These grinders are so accurately adjusted as to admit of the making of the finest flour, while avoiding actual contact of the two grinding surfaces. The simplicity of the apparatus, its cheapness and the ease with which it can be installed commend this system particularly for domestic use and for the supply of villages and small communities. Nevertheless, it is capable of being operated on an extensive scale, as is demonstrated by the large establishment at La Villette, Paris, where more than 100,000 pounds of bread are made per day from flour not more than twenty-four hours old. Chemical analyses show that the flour made according to the Schweitzer system has more than twice as much phosphate material as that made by the ordinary roller process. The importance of this fact in respect of nutrition should not be lost sight of and we must admit that nutrition, not whiteness of color, is the principal object of bread-making.

Passion for Litigation.

A recent illustration of the passion for litigation is furnished by a citizen of New York, who was a guest at one of the Mills hotels there, and whose undershirt was lost in the wash. What was deemed compensation for the lost garment was offered him, but he preferred to carry the case to the courts, where he sued Mr. Mills to recover 75 cents. He was nonsuited, and then he carried the case up to the higher courts, and now the appellate term of the supreme court has affirmed the judgment of the lower court. It has cost the litigious plaintiff the price of several dozen undershirts.

A Raging, Roaring Flood

Washed down a telegraph line which Chas. C. Ellis, of Lisbon, Ia., had to repair.
"Standing waist deep in icy water," he writes, "gave me a terrible cold and cough."

It grew worse daily. Finally the best doctors in Oakland, Neb., Sioux City and Omaha, said I had Consumption and could not live. Then I began using Dr. King's New Discovery and was wholly cured by six bottles." Positively guaranteed for Coughs, Colds and all Throat and Lung troubles by W. T. Hill. Price 50c and $1.

Ingredients of a Penny.

Pennies do not consist of copper alone, there being in them 2 per cent of tin and 3 per cent of zinc to 95 of copper. They cost the government about 42 cents a pound exclusive of stamping, and there are 148 in a pound,
so that the government makes a fair profit on every pound minted, since,
while they are redeemable in gold,
but few are ever presented.

How Books Instruct Us.

Books are masters who instruct us
without rods or ferules, without words or anger, without bread or money. If you approach them, they are not asleep; if you seek them, they do not hide; if you blunder, they do not scold;
if you are ignorant, they do not laugh at you. --Richard de Burry.

Jealousy of Country Grocers.

We had been led to suppose that opera singers were the most jealous brethren in the world. Recent events have caused us to abandon the supposition. It is doubtful whether country grocers are not the most jealous brethren.

An Amazing English Bull.

The most amazing bull of all the last ever collected or perpetrated is not Irish, but English. It is that which appears twelve times a year on the title page of a London magazine: "The ly."

NORTHERN WISCONSIN DEVELOPMENT

That rapidly developing territory which occupies the northern half of Wisconsin is not new enough to cause the hardships and vicissitudes of frontier life, and old enough to keep away the intending settler on account of exorbitant land prices. It is in that stage of partial development which gives great opportunity to bring it to the highest point of perfection and prosperity. Schools, good roads and other improvements are going in.
All that is needed is a small capital. Brains and brawn, supplemented by push and energy, will do the rest. The iron ore, marl, kaolin and clay beds
the timber and the rich soil, give equal opportunity to the settler and the manufacturer. Land is cheap and can be purchased on easy terms.

THE WISCONSIN CENTRAL

offers facilities for the quick and cheap transportation of its products and as the line penetrates
to the very center of this vast northern territory, choice of location is not confined to any one, particular locality. Interesting pamphlets and maps fully describing this beautiful and rich country can be obtained by addressing:

ANTIOCH, ILLINOIS.

There is no doubt of the result of the Cuban delay in accepting the terms offered by Congress. The case was stated in a nutshell by a member of the Cabinet, who said: "The President cannot withdraw the military government until these conditions have been accepted by Cuba or until Congress has modified its directions. The chance of any modification of the conditions by Congress is a very slim one, as the conditions were approved by men of all parties in Congress and have since been approved by the people."

Our exports to Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines are growing all the time. A table prepared by the Treasury Bureau of Statistics, shows the amount of these exports for eight months in the year, ending with February, from 1896 to 1901 inclusive. In 1896 our exports to Cuba amounted to $5,423,189; to Porto Rico, $1,454,417; and to the Philippines, $82,893. In 1901 to Cuba $17,296,752; to Porto Rico $4,295,953; and to the Philippines $2,767,881.

As a reply to the stories alleging Japan's intention to fight Russia no matter what done to China, an official statement issued by the Japanese legation in Washington, denying the stories and stating that Japan is ready to approve or support a proposition, no matter whatever makes it, provided it is just and proper, that Japan wants international relations to be fair play, and nothing more, but nothing less.

As an experiment Miss Ada A. Griffith, of Newark, N. J., threw a bottle containing a note from a steamer, in the middle of the Atlantic ocean. The note offered a reward of $2 for its return to her address. That was nine years ago. The other day she got it back through the mail. It was packed up by a fisherman who lives on a little island off the coast of Norway.

Recent conditions in China fully justify the position this government took in accepting Russia's declaration as to Manchuria. The diplomacy was originated by the United States and seems to be gradually spreading.

The difference of opinion between John D. Rockefeller, the successful writer on the life, and the New York police authorities on the honesty of the latter, is inclined to endorse that of the former.

It is interesting that President McKinley, in his last moments, asked Gov. Allen, of Ohio, to resign; his administration of the island has received its share of both in Porto Rico and in the Philippines.

Democratic rejoicing over a few municipal victories is all right. They haven't had anything to rejoice over in a long time and the future doesn't promise them much in that line.

Tom Johnson has money to spend and there is no limit to the amount the Ohio democrats will be willing to have him spend, but he cannot buy either a seat in the U. S. Senate or the governorship of Ohio.

Secretary Long has authorized Rear Admiral Remy, commander of the naval forces in the Philippines, to enlist 500 Filipinos as firemen, the work in the engine room in that climate being hard on white men.

With all due deference to the wisdom of the New York Tribune, which says we need more kickers, we think that more sawing wood and less kicking is what is needed.

President McKinley and his entire Cabinet participated in the ceremonies attending the unveiling of the equestrian statue of Gen. John A. Logan, in Washington.

With Bryan pulling one way and Cleveland another, and Hill still another, it is not surprising that many democratic editors do not know "where they are at."

Berlin papers didn't get out an "extra" on account of the news carried by a dispatch from a special British Embassy—the news that King Edward VII.

Hon. P. C. Knox has assumed the duties of Attorney General of the U. S., which his successful legal career has so well fitted him to perform.

Carter Harrison's candidacy for the democratic Presidential nomination has not been editorially endorsed by the Commoner.

There are men of prominence in the democratic party who recognize that this is the proper time to keep quiet.

Skin troubles, cuts, burns, scalds, and chafing quickly healed by the use of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. It is imitated. Be sure you get DeWitt's. W. T. Hill.

PAN-AMERICAN EXPOSITION.

The Problem of Caring for Those who Visit Buffalo Next Summer.

With a liberality which characterizes all enterprises undertaken by Dr. R. V. Pierce of Buffalo, the founder of the World's Dispensary, he has established a free bureau of information and assistance, free to visitors and householders.

The purpose of this bureau is to provide a headquarters for visitors to the exposition, where mail may be addressed and delivered. To furnish conveniences for correspondence, such as writing desks, stationery, etc. To provide a list of desirable accommodations for guests which will obviate the tiresome search for lodgings in a strange city. To give information concerning Buffalo and adjacent points of interest, in order that the visitors may do their sight-seeing with economy of time and money. To help visiting friends in any way consistent with the proposed scope of the Bureau.

ITS CENTRAL LOCATION.

This bureau is located in a beautiful old mansion of Buffalo, at 652 Main street, just opposite the Invalid's Hotel and surgical Institute, of which Dr. R. V. Pierce is chief medical director. The free bureau is fitted up with reception rooms, wash-rooms, dressing-rooms, parlors and all conveniences for out-of-town visitors.

Dr. Pierce's free bureau had its origin in the desire of the Doctor to be of some aid and assistance to the sixty-thousand druggists and dealers, who are mostly his customers, as well as his old patients; but when the plan was formulated it was found that it would take a little more effort and expense to care for everybody who might need the bureau's assistance.

When visitors arrive in Buffalo, they can go straight to the bureau at 652 Main street and ask for the needed accommodation.

NOT FOR PROFIT.

No bureau organized for profit can afford to do what Dr. Pierce is doing, and no other bureau could attempt it by reason of lack of facilities and the great expense involved.

Dr. Pierce has arranged to make your visit inexpensive, free from annoyance and anxiety, and give you every minute of time to enjoy the wonderful exposition and its manifold features of charming interest.

Dr. Pierce believes that a great medical institution like his "World's Dispensary," that is in constant touch with thousands of people, has other obligations besides those of a commercial nature.

It may contribute to the pleasure and comfort of humanity, even in cases where the profit is not immediately apparent.

Impelled by these principles, he has organized a bureau to furnish Pan-American visitors with accommodations and such information, guidance and direction, when they arrive in Buffalo, as will help them to spend their vacation in the most agreeable manner.

The question of where are you going to lodge is of prime importance and should be settled first of all. Have all mail, telegrams and parcels sent in care of the bureau, if you wish. Use their waiting rooms and parlors. Ask them about special rates and excursions to Niagara, the Whitepool Rapids, Toronto, Chautauque, up the Great Lakes, down the St. Lawrence. Reliable information on any and every point of interest to tourists will be cheerfully granted. Remember, there is no charge or any fee of any kind for any service rendered by Dr. Pierce's bureau.

Rating Unimproved Land Values.

The system of rating on the unimproved land values seems to be growing in favor with the local authorities of New Zealand. Hitherto the land and improvements have been equally liable to be taxed for local purposes, but a recent act of parliament made it optional with boroughs whether they would continue the old system or adopt the method of taxing the unimproved values only. A good many boroughs are making the experiment in spite of the strenuous opposition of landholders. The boroughs adopting the new system are mainly those in which there are considerable quantities of land lying unimproved, being held in fact by the owners for a rise in value. —Robert M. Hackett, in Chicago Record.

Man of Envyable Versatility.

Assemblyman R. W. Maizets of Washington county is a person of most enviable versatility, as will be seen by the following information printed on his letter heads: "Member of Kansas Medical society, Central Branch Medical society and Southern Missouri Medical society; member of United States pension board; president board of education, owner of Happy Home farm, owner of Admiral Dewey, No. 21,809, herd hog; breeder China swine, bronze turkeys and Plymouth Rock chickens."

To Penetrate Afghanistan.

Prof. A. V. Williams of Columbia university leaves for India in the interest of the department of Indo-Iranian languages and literatures in the university. He will make an attempt to penetrate Afghanistan through the Khyber pass and will study the customs and religious ceremonies of the Parsees and Hindoos. He expects to return in June.

Bullet in His Brain.

An Australian volunteer is carrying a bullet in his brain, embedded too deeply to allow of extraction, and declares that but for the knowledge of the fact he never felt better in his life.

Car's Three Little Daughters.

While in the clinic the car and carline generally spend a great portion of each day with their three little daughters. They are deeply attached to three tiny princesses, of whom the eldest, Grand Duchess Olga, can speak fluently French, Russian, English and German. The imperial nurses are entirely managed by Miss Orchardson, the English woman who brought up the late grand duchess of Hesse's orphan children.

School Hygiene.

A suggestion in regard to school hygiene has been made by the district government of Cologne. It is to the effect that the country school boards provide an appropriate number of felt and wooden shoes to be placed at the disposal of the children. By this system those who come from a distance with wet footgear will have an opportunity to exchange it for dry shoes.

Suffering from Sciatica.

John E. Russell, Democratic candidate for governor of Massachusetts several years ago, who has now been in Europe in search of improvement for his impaired health for about two years, was at recent accounts in Geneva, where he is detained by a severe attack of sciatica, which has caused him much pain. He was on his way to the south of the continent when overtaken by it.

Electric Fire Engines Economical.

The chief fire engineer of the New Orleans, La., department has figured out that the relative running cost as between a three-horse hitch engine of the first class and an electric power engine is $60 a month for the former and $27 for the same period for the latter. These figures show a clear gain of $33 per month and $400 per annum in round figures for the electric power engine.

Educational Lobbyists.

Governor Stanley of Kansas has administered a hint to president and professors of state colleges and schools that they are not paid for hanging about legislative halls pushing schemes for appropriation bills. There has been for some time considerable bitterness as to the division of money parceled out by state, and not a few leading educators have become lobbyists in the interest of pet measures.

Brother of Marcus Daly.

Among the inmates of the soldiers' home at Hot Springs, S. D., is Rev. P. Daly, who, from reading a newspaper biography of the late Marcus Daly, is convinced that he and the Montana millionaire are brothers. They were separated when very young and never again found one another. Rev. Mr. Daly often read of the western Croesus, but never imagined that was his little brother who left home penniless.

Surviving Member of 35th Congress.

A. J. Harlan of Savannah, Mo., is now the sole surviving member of the thirty-fifth congress, which convened in 1849. He was elected from the eleventh Indiana district and served two terms. Later he removed to Dakota, where he was speaker of the house of representatives. Mr. Harlan, who is now 85 years old, but still an active man, has lived in Savannah since 1863.

Many Points in Common.

Queen Wilhelmina of Holland and Duke Henry, her husband elect, have many points in common. Neither is the issue of a first marriage, Wilhelmina being the daughter of William III's second wife, and the duke the youngest child of a third wife. Both lost their fathers at an early age; both have been reared under the loving care of a widowed mother.

Living in Tents.

There are families and remnants of families in Galveston, proud people, and once well-to-do, who lost their homes, their furniture, everything in the storm, and by necessity live in tents. Some of them have been so proud they would not go to the committee for money sent for their relief, and have only taken their share when it has been forced upon them.

Indiana's Gold and Silver.

Excitement of the wildest character prevails in Warwick county, Indiana, over the discovery of gold and silver near Lynville. The land where the ore has been found is of the poorest, but owners are paying up back taxes in the hope of realizing handsomely. Hotels and restaurants are crowded with strangers and many more are arriving daily.

Junketing Tours Thwarted.

Acting Governor Jelks of Alabama has excited favorable comment by thwarting the members of the legislature in some of their proposed junkets at the expense of the state. The legislators had planned to make a tour of the normal and agricultural schools of the state, but the executive vetoed the enabling resolution on the ground that the expense would be more than the trip would be worth.

Osgood, Mo., Oct. 23, 1899.

PEPSON SYRUP CO., Monticello, Ill. GENTLEMEN:—I have used Syrup Pepsin for some time and find it gives most excellent results and it is one of the greatest selling preparations I have ever carried in stock.

I do not hesitate to recommend it. Very respectfully, Sold by W. T. Hill. DR. T. JONES.

He Kept His Leg.

Twelve years ago J. W. Sullivan, of Hartford, Conn., scratched his leg with a rusty wire. Inflammation and blood poisoning set in. For two years he suffered intensely. Then best doctors urged amputation, "but," he writes, "I used one bottle of Electric Bitters and my leg was sound and well as ever." For Eruptions, Eczema, Tetter Salt Rheum, Sores and all blood disorders Electric Bitters has no rival on earth. Try them; W. T. Hill will guarantee satisfaction or refund money. Only 50c.

Where Cows Wear Earrings.

A cow in earrings, indeed, seems an oddity, but in Belgium every cow must wear them. The director general of agriculture has decreed that all cattle are to wear earrings after they have attained the age of three months. Breeders are obliged to keep a record of the cattle raised by them, and on the ring which is fastened to the creature's ear is engraved its number to prevent the substitution of one animal for another.

A Nut Harvest.

"Tap! Tap!" goes something in the trees in the nut season. It is a bird called the nut-hatch. He is not able to pick the nuts from the tree but when one falls he carries it in his beak to a tree and, fixing it in some convenient crevice begins operations to split the shell. He strikes it with repeated blows, every blow of his beak falling on the same pin-point of space until finally the shell falls apart.

Madame Melba.

Madame Melba prides herself on being a "natural song-bird." She did not pass through a protracted period of voice culture prior to her operatic debut. From childhood she has been able to sing with ease the most difficult music, and she mastered the complicated score of "Aida" in a few hours. "I cannot even remember," says the fair Australian, "when I first began to trill a note."

A Poet's Striking Appearance.

Holger Drachmann, the Danish poet, is one of the most attractive personalities in Scandinavia. He is unusually tall and of striking appearance, and has, in spite of his 50 years and his white hair, kept his soul young. He can still loathe and love like a boy of 20—a true vagabond, a roving spirit, who never tamely submitted to the laws of man.

Hybrid Fruit.

Crossings in fruit brings out some fine varieties—an improvement. Recently a new fruit was exhibited in London. The plant bearing it is a hybrid between the raspberry and the common blackberry. The taste of the fruit combines the flavor of the dewberry with that of the raspberry, and it comes into perfection as the raspberries are falling.

Compromise Doesn't Bind County.

The referee appointed by Judge E. G. Smith of the Circuit Court at Yankton, S. D., in the case of Yankton county versus the bondsmen of the late A. W. Petterson, county treasurer, to recover the amount of the latter's default, has decided that the county is not bound by any compromise entered into between the county commissioners and Mr. Petterson.

Late Pennsylvania Senator.

Francis A. Osborn, one of the Philadelphia members of the Pennsylvania senate, died at his home recently of pleuro-pneumonia. He had gone to Harrisburg a few days before to take part in the senatorial battle, and it is thought that his hard work there aggravated his disease and hastened his death.

Some Meat Is Necessary.

Consul Hughes writes from Coburg, Germany, that in opposition to the determined vegetarians who condemn all animal food there is a growing number of physiologists who insist that abstention from meat, if continued for ages and generations, is responsible for the feebleness and intellect of certain races.

Best Emergency Ration.

So far the best emergency ration is one devised by American army officers. It consists of one pound of raw lean beef and one pound of bread, seasoned with salt and red pepper, eaten dry without cooking. One pound of the mixture sustains a soldier in good condition for twenty-four hours.

Talking and Listening.

It is a secret known to but few, yet of no small use in the conduct of life, that when you fall into a man's conversation, the first thing you should consider is, whether he has a greater inclination to hear you, or that you should hear him. The latter is the more general desire.—Steele.

CHAPTER XIV.

It was hard for Hetty, when she and Mary needed close before the fire that evening, to close their customary long symmetrical talk, and when, afterward, they retired to bed together, to restrain herself from telling the important step she contemplated taking on the morrow. But the secret was not wholly her own, and she feared to intrude it to the confidence of the little old maid's lavender-bayonet. The only person to whom she could talk frankly about it was Danny, whose co-operation was, to a certain extent, necessary in the plan John had formed, and whose willingness to render help was simply essential.

"You," she said to him, "want to get away to the end of the road, by the big black tree, real early in the morning, and wait there until John comes along in the center. The minute you see him, fire shots, close together, just as you run. That is all you have to do."

"Running for dear life?"

Danny reflected and shook his head dubiously.

"Gee can't run," he said contemptuously, "cause they wear rocks. Mam'll catch you, sure, and I sort of don't want to all her full of shot 'till I have to."

"Why, Danny? You awful boy! The idea of anybody ever wanting you to do such a thing?"

"Well, didn't I tell you I don't like to, my self? But, say, I've got the idea of that you want—Laudnum, you know, put people to sleep. Now, there's a bottle of horse liniment in the barn, that's chock full of Laudnum. Bill Taylor says he can smell it; and if we'd chuck that into mam—"

"Danny! Oh, you'll surely get yourself hanged some day! If you don't promise me that you will not do anything to mother, I'll not run away at all. Why, how do you know but that you might half kill her, giving her things like that? And then, how would you feel, you wicked boy?"

"How I'd feel? Well, sorry, I s'pose. But how do you s'pose John'll feel if this scheme busts up? He's just dead set on getting you, though. I'm sure I don't see why when he's got the pick of the girls in the township."

"That will do now, Danny. You will know more about such things when you get to be older. All you have to do now is just what John says, and if things don't turn out right, it will not be your fault."

Danny did not dispute that proposition, but it was plain to be seen he took a gloomy view of the probable outcome of a job of murder not personally engineered by himself, and would have been quite willing to assume the responsibility of running the elopement in ways that would have been a terror to parents and guardians.

Very little sleep did Hetty Mulvill get that night; not because she was a feather-headed fool-girl, half-crazed by the delicious excitement of a prospective elopement, but by reason of her being a good, sensible one, who realized that she was about to take a very serious step—one, in all probability, irrevocable and weighted with all her life's destiny. It is not necessary that an intelligent, reasoning maiden shall, under such circumstances, feel a distrust of her lover to set her feet on a dangerous path, but she was, in fact, a distrustful woman, and her very moments with earnestness of purpose and intensity of action, so we have those latent forces into active being and give to their control the helm of our destiny.

The girl got into a condition of nervous wakefulness, with thinking, hoping and fearing.

"Come," she said to herself at length. "I shall positively get no sleep at all, and will look like an owl to-morrow, if I don't drive John and marry him and all that clean out of my head. I wonder if counting the clock-ticks would put me to sleep? I'd give some people, I've heard. One, two, three, four—How strangely they are! Everything sounds louder at night, I suppose. I wonder if Mary Elder knows that she snores—just a little bit? One, two, three—I wonder if I snore? And if I do, what will John say if he ever finds it out? Pah! Why can't I stop thinking about John? One, two—Oh! Twelve o'clock! Well, if this isn't the longest night! I wonder if John is lying awake, too? There it is again—'Tisn't John! 'Tisn't Mary! I wonder what makes the light of so many colors?—Every time the fire flares up there is a little ribbon, or the color of gold, under the door, and the moonlight on the wall is as white and cold as the snow, and the light in John's eyes is blue. Rather John's eyes! I wish I could go to sleep. How can a body sleep when there are so many noises? I don't believe there ever were so many noises about this house before. Let me count. There's the clock makes three kinds, ticking, a wheezy whizz when it's going to strike and striking. Then there are the crickets. I don't believe they make that noise with their hind legs, whatever the natural history book may say. And that mouse is gnawing away again. Of course, Danny has forgotten to set the trap. To-morrow night, I'll—no, I won't—I'll be away with John. There it is! John! John! Errrrrrrring! Come, come to John. Oh, this won't do at all. One, two, three, four, five! Good gracious! What a crack that was! I wonder why timber snaps so in cold weather. John said he had got all the timber out for a new house, and we would live at his mother's until it was put up. I wonder if she will like me. If she doesn't, I shall be awfully lonesome when John is not about. One, two, three, four, five, six—"

So she fought the night through until the clock struck four, when she thought she might venture to get up without disturbing the family too profoundly. Her dressing had been carefully planned beforehand. The gown would, of course, have to be the ordinary every-day brown merino. A better one, such as she would have liked to wear when going anywhere with John, would certainly provoke her mother's vigilant suspicions. But the old lady, luckily, would not see with what care she had dressed underneath, to secure comfort on the long, cold drive before her. Her warmly wadded, fur-trimmed cloak, cherry-tinted knitted hood, white woolen "muffler," thick mittens and fur-lined overshoes she rolled in a tight bundle and hid in a dark corner of the summer kitchen, near the back door. All these preparations had been made before Mrs. Mulvill even noticed that her daughter was moving about the house.

Then Hetty busied herself getting breakfast. Soon the tempting odors of hot coffee and frying ham tickled Danny's nose, up in the loft, and for once he came tumbling downstairs in a hurry, without having to be rolled out of bed or even called—an almost unprecedented thing. And so eager was he to get off with his gun—"squirrel hunting," he said, but with a sly wink at Hetty—that he would hardly wait to snatch a hasty breakfast.

The hired man came in. He was going to take a load of grain to the mill that morning and could not get an early breakfast at home, because his wife was sick. Hetty sat him down at the table and began dipping the buckwheat batter from its crock to the smoking griddle for cakes. By the time he was through eating, Mary Elder and Mrs. Mulvill were up. The latter congratulated herself upon seeing the hired man before he started. She fancied that she had felt some premonitory twinges of rheumatism and wanted him to be sure to get for her, from the miller, a bottle of black-snake oil. He said he would not forget and went away. Hetty put upon the table a tall pile of golden-brown buckwheat cakes, and the three women sat down.

The meal was little more than half over, when the girl's sharp ears caught the sound of two gunshots, close together, at a distance, but clear. Neither of the others noticed them.

"There!" she exclaimed. "I have forgotten again to set water on for the dishes and am rising from the table which was in the kitchen, took up the kettle to place it upon the stove."

It was empty—as she had taken care it should be. She turned to the water pail; it, too, was empty. Taking it up, as if going to the well, she passed out of the back door, which she closed behind her. Her mother and Mary were deep in discussion of the advisability of "turning" a certain blue cashmere that had already seen much service. But, after some minutes, the old woman exclaimed petulantly:

"Why don't that girl come and finish her breakfast? Hetty! Hetty!"

There was no response. At that precise moment Hetty was already two hundred yards away from the house, with her bundle in her arms, flying down the lane as if an angry bull had been behind her.

After a time, Mrs. Mulvill broke forth again:

"Her coffee is getting cold and them buckwheats will be like leather. Hetty! Hetty!"

Getting no reply, she arose, went to the back door, looked out and repeated her call, loudly, but in vain.

By that time Hetty was in John Cameron's cutter, out of sight, beyond the bend in the road, doing the best she could with nervous fingers and her lover's rather awkward help, to bundle herself up comfortably in the warm wraps she had not dared to wait to put on until now.

"Where are we going, John?" she asked anxiously.

"To the turnpike, first. There our track will be lost. Then, if they chase us, they will not know whether we have struck out for Nobletown, Canonsburg, or Washington, and, as they will hardly be likely to think we have started off for this way for Pittsburgh, we will get an everlasting start on them while they are puzzling."

When Mrs. Mulvill had repeated her call two or three times, she noticed the door of the summer kitchen open, observed the water pail dropped in the snow near by, and suspicion flashed, into her mind. Without a word she wheeled, and darted into Hetty's bedroom. From there, a bowl of angry dismay quickly proclaimed that she had made a discovery. Hetty's warm wraps, as well as the girl herself were missing, and the old woman shrewdly guessed the truth.

"Hetty has run away with that John Cameron!" she shrieked, rushing back to the kitchen.

Mary Elder, leisurely enjoying her buckwheat cakes and honey, was almost paralyzed by amazement, and could only weakly gasp:

"Oh, no, Mrs. Mulvill! You don't think so?"

"Don't? Well, I do! And, what's more, I know she has. I'd lay my life on it!"

"Why, she never even hinted to me that she had thought of such a thing. I should think she would have told me."

"Oh, no! Not she! Of course not! She was smart enough for keeping her mouth to herself, and with him putting her up to it. And to think I didn't see anything out of the way with her! I might have known there was some devilry in her getting up so mortal early this morning. But she needn't think she is going to get away so mighty easy. Danny! Hi, Danny!"

"Danny's gone to shoot squirrels."

"So he has, and I've forgot it. This trouble drove it out of my head. I'll have to ride the mare. Conspire the boy! No day would do him to go hunting but this day, of all the days in the year!"

"Why, Mrs. Mulvill, Danny goes hunting every day!"

"Ah! So he does. Well, I'll go do some hunting myself. I'm ready, now."

Mrs. Mulvill had not wasted a minute in her talking, for she was a woman of action; and while her tongue ran on, she had been busily preparing herself to pursue the lovers. Fully dressed now for the road, it took her but a few minutes to saddle the bay mare and promptly she set out at a gallop for Cousin Simeon's.

His kinsman and constabulary authority, she seemed to think, would make him a most effective ally in this emergency, but how much stronger her confidence would have been had she known that his energies would be inspired by an infinitely more powerful feeling—that of ferocious jealousy.

Simeon and Rufus were both at the sawmill, putting in a new log-car, when she reined up at the door, with a loud, impatient—

"Hi there!"

In a few vigorous words she told her startling news; Hetty had run away with John Cameron, and she was on her way to the turnpike. Rufus did most of the audible swearing, but Simeon's face was hard set and white with a passion deeper than words could vent. The constable hated his successful rival, as a Cameron; as a man who had defied his authority and whipped him; as his superior in every manly grace and attribute; and finally as the winner of the fair prize upon which he had fixed his heart's desire. Yes; he was the right man to enlist for the pursuit of the lovers. He still had that war in his possession and now it would be worth while taking all probable risks to effect its service. It was as a fugitive from justice that he would hunt John Cameron down; not as a lover eloping with his sweetheart. Of course, under existing circumstances, the young fellow would be certain to resist arrest. At least, it was to be hoped he would. And if he did? Well, a constable in the discharge of his duty could legally take such extreme measures to enforce his authority and uphold the dignity of the law as would never be sanctioned in an ordinary citizen interfering, however properly, in another's love affair. The idea suggested by Rufus during their ride to church was by no means a bad one.

It must not be supposed that Simeon permitted himself to put into audible words anything of these thoughts turbulently rolling through his mind. He was much too cautious for that.

"We'll do all we can for you, to bring Hetty back," he said to Mrs. Mulvill, and that was all.

While Rufus hurriedly hitched a team to the two-horse sleigh, put in the robes and secured a bottle of rum for consumption en route, Simeon, in the tool room of the mill, gave his exclusive attention to the careful loading of his revolver, which was one of the old "pepper-box" kind, but a sufficiently deadly weapon at close quarters.

Within half an hour, the pursuers started, and when she had seen them off, Mrs. Mulvill jogged away home in a much more contented and hopeful frame of mind.

She had sent Murder to hunt down Love.

CHAPTER XV.

A light snow had fallen during the night, and on the comparatively little-traveled country road the lovers first took there was no difficulty in following the track of John's cutter. But on the turnpike it was quickly lost among the multiplicity of others. Only from the direction it took in emerging from the road—turning towards the left—it appeared that they had gone to Washington. But, after driving half an hour, the pursuers met a man coming from Washington, who said that he had seen no cutter with a man and a girl in it on the road that day. They went back to where the trail entered upon the pike, and, by more careful and acute observation than they had employed before, found now that John had cunningly driven a few hundred yards toward Washington, and then retraced his course and gone in the direction of Canonsburg.

He had evidently calculated upon the probability that he had occurred on his track had cost his pursuers nearly an hour and a half of valuable time. The consciousness of having been so easily outwitted still further enraged Simeon Mulvill, and he lashed his horses into a gallop.

The fortunate accident of meeting a man who knew Cameron and had recognized him, with a girl, in a cutter, on the road to Pittsburgh, saved the constable from a ruin chase to Canonsburg, and enabled him, though still far in the rear, to gain ground steadily in the pursuit from that time on.

John Cameron, confident of having baffled his possible pursuers and dreaming naught of the danger now following swiftly, was wildly happy in possession of the greatest joy and triumph of his life. Hetty, nestled close under his arm, so bundled up that only her sparkling eyes, the blossomy roundness of her cheeks and the tip of her little nose appeared amid her mufflings, in submission to his insistence uncovered her lips "just for a moment," and the moment was so long that the big black horse felt the neglected reins lying loosely upon his back, and intoxicated by exultation in his own vigor and the inspiring freshness of the morning breeze, took the bit between his teeth and galloped madly away with the speed of the wind, his bells sounding a peann of rejoicing. That was on the country turnpike; there was no such good going on the Pittsburgh road.

It had been badly cut up by heavy teaming during a recent thaw, and the snowfall of the preceding night had only partly concealed and not filled the deep ruts and holes in the frozen ground. Added to that, when the sun was well up, the snow was softened just enough to "ball" constantly under the black horse's feet and worry him. Consequently, the travel was slower than John had anticipated, and it was the middle of the afternoon when he found himself descending the long, steep sidehill above Temperanceville, and saw Pittsburgh, across the Monongahela river, before him. But that did not trouble him. Anybody in pursuit would have had the same difficulties to encounter, and he had a good enough start to free him from anxiety about the result of a chase. Besides, his goal was in sight; the victory practically won.

The little ferryboat—propelled by horse power—had been laid up for the season, and since then all crossing of the river was upon the ice. So thick and strong was this natural bridge that enormous wagons laden with coal, and each drawn by four huge horses, had crossed it in almost a continuous procession between the mines of Coal Hill and the city, day after day for weeks, without causing its glassy floor to even crack; but it was no longer so secure. Successive snowfalls had "made it rotten," and rivermen affirmed that the swift current of the stream had "cut it away on the under side," so that now, though still perfectly safe for pedestrians, only rather venturesome persons drove horses upon it. Those who did drive across followed a curving course almost like a great letter S, that led from the ferry landing on the South Pittsburgh side to the city wharf near "the Point," that way having been carefully picked out by soundings where the ice was yet thickest and strongest.

FRIGHTENED HIS WIFE.

Forty Cents Almost the Cause of a Catastrophe.

Before Mrs. Browley was married she scoffed at the misguided girls and women who kept personal accounts. Her argument was that if you knew how much money you had and it was all gone what was the use of piling on the anguish by having your folly and extravagance in black and white to stare you in the face, especially as you had no more money at the end of the month than you had without an account book?

But since she has been running a house she has achieved not one but nearly a dozen account books. There is one devoted to the groceryman, another to the butcher, personal accounts take a third and so on till she spends nearly all her glad young life balancing sums. It is a matter of pride with her that they shall come out even and so there was last month when forty cents refused to be accounted for. She and Mr. Browley had a grave and lengthy discussion over the missing forty. Each accused the other of frivolling the sum away and neglecting to enter it on the proper book, "Sundries."

Mr. Browley insisted strenuously he was not gully; Mrs. Browley looked pained and urged him to confess. He left for downtown vowing vengeance. It was late that afternoon when Mrs. Browley was entertaining a roomful of aristocratic callers that a telegraph boy appeared. The maid brought in the fatal yellow envelope and at once the bride knew her husband had been fatally injured and was sending for her. Some one revived her with smelling salts, a lady in purple velvet fanned her with a hastily snatched lamp shade and a third visitor with more presence of mind than the rest opened the telegram. The message read:

"Honest, now, what did you do with that forty cents?"—Chicago News.

IT IS EASY TO GAIN WEIGHT.

How Geskie Put On Half a Pound an Hour for Two Days.

The physicians of Trenton, N. J., are puzzling their heads over the remarkable case of Joseph Geskie, who increased his weight twenty-four pounds in two days by lying in bed and eating cinnamon buns. Geskie appeared at a recruiting station a few days ago. He was the picture of distress. His clothes were in tatters and he had a hungry look.

"I want to join the army," he said to the recruiting officer. "I've hooped it all the way from Connecticut, and reckon I don't look as cute as I might, but I can fight an' I'll show up all right, I guess, in a uniform."

When Geskie got on the scales he tipped the beam at 128 pounds. "Too light for our use, young man," said the officer. "You ought to weigh up in the forties somewhere."

Two days later Geskie reappeared at the recruiting station, looking the picture of health. His face was full and his stomach well rounded.

"I reckon I can hit the mark now," he said, as he walked across the room and stepped onto the scales. The officer weighed him and he struck the 152-pound notch.

The officer was astonished and searched Geskie's clothes for hidden weights, but could find none. "How did you manage it?" he asked.

"It's easy enough," Geskie answered. "I've been able to change my weight ever since I was a boy. I went to a hotel an' went to bed. I bought three dozen cinnamon buns an' eat 'em as fast as I could."

The name of Joseph Geskie was added to the list of volunteers.

The Grand Duke of Hesse is skillful with the needle, and his embroidery is said to be beautiful. He takes the greatest interest in his work, and is particularly clever in the arrangement of colors. He has a very artistic nature, as he is devoted to music, dancing, and acting, but he does not care much about more active pursuits, though he both shoots and rides.

STATES ARE WIDE AWAKE.

Planning for Representation at the Pan-American Exposition.

The degree of interest in the Pan-American Exposition which has developed in the different States and Territories is up to the highest expectations. It assures adequate representation of the integral parts of the Union, and in conjunction with government action a complete and comprehensive display of the diversified resources of Uncle Sam's broad domain. Official recognition of the Exposition has been given in all the States.

New York's appropriation is $300,000. A magnificent permanent building has been erected, and an exhibit which will be highly creditable to the Empire State is being prepared.

Illinois has appropriated $75,000 for a building and exhibit.

Michigan's appropriation for a building and exhibit is $40,000.

Ohio's appropriation is $30,000. The State has erected a handsome building and is preparing an exhibit.

Missouri has appropriated $50,000 for a building and exhibit.

Wisconsin appropriated $25,000 for a building and exhibit.

The New England States have joined together for the erection of a building and display of their resources and industries. Massachusetts appropriated $15,000, Rhode Island $30,000, and Connecticut, Maine, Vermont and New Hampshire are expending sums sufficient for suitable exhibits.

California will make a very extensive exhibit through the State Board of Triumphal Bridge at the intersection of the two principal thoroughfares and at the head of the dock landing of the State and foreign building allotment. The size of the building is 84x122 feet. A ten-foot terrace walk extends around the outside, being widened at the northwest corner to a circular form, thus providing an ample approach from the dock landing. The lower floor is intended for the use of the general public and the upper floor for the commissioners, State officials and the State guests. Natural gas is used for heating and acetylene gas for illuminating purposes. The artistic manner of lighting constitutes part of the interior decorations. As the approach from the dock landing is the most picturesque, the building is embellished at the northwest corner with a stately group. The background, worked in relief upon the plaster, shows the great seal of the State, with its hills, trees, sunrise and sheaves of wheat and arrows. In the foreground is the center figure standing on the prow of a boat to typify the State. The Ohio River is represented by a Mermaid and Lake Erie by a Triton.

The Michigan Building occupies a very desirable site in the Court of State and Foreign Buildings of the Exposition. The style of architecture is colonial, with large porches. There is a large hall with mantel, ladies and gentlemen's parlors, secretary's office, check room, postoffice, lavatories, etc., on the ground floor, and a hall with mantel, committee-room, directors' room, two bedrooms, ladies' parlor and bathroom. The floors are hardwood.

Alabama proposes to appropriate $25,000 for an exhibit.

Georgia has appropriated a sum sufficient to pay the expenses of a fine exhibit.

Iowa has appointed a commission and an exhibit is being arranged. The Agricultural and Horticultural Boards will participate in the display.

Idaho has appropriated $15,000 for an exhibit.

Pennsylvania's appropriation for representation is $35,000.

Minnesota has appropriated $20,000 for an exhibit.

New Jersey's appropriation for representation is $25,000.

North Dakota will expend its appropriation of $10,000 for an exhibit.

Kentucky has appointed a commission and an exhibit is being arranged.

Maryland has appointed a commission to prepare an exhibit and the Baltimore Manufacturers Association is co-operating.

Delaware has made an appropriation for an exhibit.

Washington, Montana, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas and other States will be suitably represented.

One of the handsomest buildings in the Court of State and Foreign Buildings at the Pan-American Exposition is that erected by the State of Ohio. It stands on the broad plateau near the

The porches, which are noble and commanding in appearance, have fluted columns. The roof is shingled and stained green. Unlike most of the other structures on the grounds, the Michigan Building has plain white walls, reminding of the White City at Chicago. The dimensions of this building are 100x82 feet.

The Illinois Building is a fine example of architectural art and appropriately representative of the great State of the Middle West. It covers an area 72x120 feet and is two stories high. There is a wide veranda encompassing the house on all sides. The lower floor is divided into two spacious reception-rooms and a grand hallway, from which ascends a staircase into the second story, which contains four smaller reception-rooms. The walls of the building are covered with staff. The tiled roof surmounts an exterior highly decorated. Four sculptured figures near the entrance symbolize the principal industries of the State—agriculture, manufactures, commerce and mining.

The Wisconsin State Building is of the Spanish Gothic style of architecture, 48x40 feet in dimensions, and two stories high. Its situation is one of the most desirable in the Court of State and Foreign Buildings, near the bay of the Mirror Lake on the east side of the Triumphal Bridge, and in a setting of beautiful trees and flowers. It is surrounded by a broad veranda, over which is a large sheltered balcony.

A motor-car has been designed for towing canal-boats. At a recent trial it towed a heavily-laden barge at the rate of three miles an hour with the greatest ease.

It is estimated that the Canadian gold fields yielded last year 1,237,802 ounces of gold, valued at $24,000,000. Compared with the preceding year, 1899, this is an increase in ounces of about 250,000, and in value of $5,000,000.

Roman dandles in the first, second and third centuries of our era wore heavy rings in winter, which they exchanged for others of lighter weight during the summer.

There are sixteen cities out of the 120 largest cities which have a greater sum invested in public libraries—that is, owned by the city—than New York. During the next few years, however, there will be erected in New York City the finest library building, exceeding the Congressional Library at Washington, in the United States.

Emmons, Antioch; Thomson's Pharmacy, Grayslake.

Quite a scare was occasioned Monday afternoon by a fire burning in the back yard of the house occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Blanchard. The fire it appears started in some refuse around the barn, probably from ashes thrown out doors, and although several neighbors saw the smoke they all concluded that Mr. Blanchard was cleaning up the yard and burning the rubbish and paid no attention to it, until it was discovered by Mrs. Blanchard just as it had begun to burn the side of the barn, who gave an alarm. Several neighbors were promptly on the scene and with buckets succeeded in putting out the fire before it had done any damage.

Marion Kooke, manager for T. M. Thompson, a large importer of fine millinery at 1658 Milwaukee avenue, Chicago, says: "During the late severe weather I caught a dreadful cold which kept me awake nights and made me unfit to attend my work during the day. One of my milliners was taking Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for a severe cold at that time, which seemed to relieve her so quickly that I bought some for myself. It acted like magic and I began to improve at once. I am now entirely well and feel very pleased to acknowledge its merits." For sale by W. H. Emmons, Antioch; Thomson's Pharmacy, Grayslake.

Serious Accident.

Ed Norton was the victim of a very serious accident recently. He was employed by Ed. Howard, of Fox Lake, to excavate for his new building and was thus engaged when struck by a falling beam. His head was severely cut and he sustained a number of bruises. Eleven stitches were required to close the wound. Dr. Wells of this village was the physician in attendance.—McHenry Plaindealer.

A Successful Entertainment.

The entertainment given by the pupils of the Antioch High School at the opera house Saturday evening was a great success financially, about fifty dollars being realized for the library fund. In the play, "Out in the Streets," while all taking part in it done very well, the parts taken by Harry Mann and Thomas McCreel were exceptionally good and worthy more than a passing notice. The farce, "Who is to Inherit," was very good throughout, and in fact the entire evening's entertainment was a most enjoyable event and reflects much credit upon those taking part in it. The hall was comfortably filled and every one seemed pleased with the entertainment and glad to have contributed their mite toward the library fund. Several fine selections were given by pupils of the school on the piano which added much to the enjoyment of the evening.

School Notes.

Libbie Webb is absent from school this week.

Edna McVey visited the high school one day last week.

Carrie and Clifford Stanton are absent from school.

Mabel Turner was absent from school Tuesday.

The entertainment was a success in every respect and about one hundred volumes have been ordered for the library with more to follow.

The Country of Sheridan's Ride.

The unique project of photographing the entire route of Sheridan's ride, from Winchester, Virginia, to Cedar Creek, as it is to-day, has been carried out by The Ladies' Home Journal, and the result will be shown in a picture story of fourteen photographs. Sheridan and his aids on horse-back, from historical pictures, have been introduced into each picture, so that the ride of 1864 is shown as if it were taken to-day through that country, which, in reality, has changed but little.

Northern Wisconsin Railroad Lands are increasing in value from year to year. Railroads are the great civilization, for they give the settler as well as the manufacturer equal opportunity to work in undeveloped fields, thereby rapidly settling the country and bringing forth its undiscovered riches. Northern Wisconsin is rich in iron ore, clay, kaolin, marl, timber and fine farm lands. It has made many a settler independent and added to the wealth of mankind. Opportunities have not passed, as there is still a generous supply of land which can be obtained at low figures and on easy terms.

The Wisconsin Central Railway was one of the first roads to penetrate the vast Northern Wisconsin wilderness which stretches across the state from east to west. It, also, has developed from year to year and today offers the best of transportation facilities, enabling all to ship the products of that section to any market in the world. Illustrated pamphlets can be obtained by addressing W. H. Killen, Land and Industrial Commissioner, Durston Johnson, General Freight Agent or James C. Pond, General Passenger Agent, Colby & Abbot Bldg., Milwaukee, Wis.

An Exceptional Lake.
An interesting exploration of Lake Tanganyika and the country north of it, finished recently, revealed the fact that while certain sea mollusks are found in this lake, it is the only one of all the large African lakes in which such phenomena are observed. This lake is only a short distance, some eighty miles, from the great Congo basin, much of which, without doubt, was once covered by the sea.

Wife's Photograph in Horse's Eye.
J. P. Sullivan of Salina, Kan., has a horse, according to a report, in whose right eye there is a photograph of his wife. He has been offered $500 for the horse, but he refuses to sell it. The photo is said to be a perfect likeness. Mrs. Sullivan was standing in front of the horse during an electrical storm, and veterinary surgeons attribute to this the fact that the photo appears in the horse's eye. The sight is not affected.

"I had piles so bad I could get no rest nor find a cure until I tried DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. After using it once I forgot I ever had anything like Piles." B. C. Boice, Somers Point, N. Y. Look out for imitations. Be sure you ask for DeWitt's. Sold by W. T. Hill.

You will waste time if you try to cure indigestion or dyspepsia by starving yourself. That only makes it worse when you do eat hearty. You always need plenty of good food properly digested. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure is the result of years of scientific research for something that would digest not only some elements of food but every kind. And it is the one remedy that will do it. W. T. Hill.

The Biggest Sturgeon.
The largest sturgeon on record was caught in the North sea. It weighed 525 pounds, but the delight of the fishermen was tempered by the fact that it did $750 worth of damage to the nets before it was given the coup de grace.
